

Aeropath member elected to EMBO

The European Molecular Biology Organisation (EMBO) has announced that Professor James Naismith, (University of St Andrews) has been elected to its membership. Jim was one of 66 new members elected from across the EU on the basis of their excellence in research.

Commenting on his election, Professor Naismith said "I am delighted to be elected to this prestigious organisation. The honour reflects the work done by my co-workers (past and present). It is their dedication and imagination that is being recognised. I am grateful to my colleagues, the University and my funders BBSRC, The Wellcome Trust and EU (Aeropath) for all their support."

We warmly congratulate Jim for this deserved award.
